My movie star crush is coming to stay at my house.

And he's my sister's new boyfriend.

My sister Juliet has always gotten everything she wants. It's mostly fine though. I never wanted the spotlight. That was for Juliet. And now that she's America's most popular starlet? She can have it.

But when Gran—the feisty woman who raised us, and who I cannot seem to wean off video games, an afternoon doobie, or her daily Manhattan—has a huge party to celebrate her 90th birthday, Juliet brings the spotlight right to our front door. Literally.

In the form of my ultimate movie-star crush, Ryan McDonnell. I can barely form a sentence around the guy (at least I don't still have a poster of him on my wall). And I definitely can't get over the fact that he's Juliet's new boyfriend. Because of course he is. She's Juliet Manchester. And I'm ... well, I'm the boring sister.

I just need to get through the weekend with them—and with the magazine people who are covering them and the party for a feature. I just need to stay away from Ryan and his warm curious eyes, his perfectly chiseled arms, and the impossibly sexy things that come out of his mouth when we're alone together.

It's only one weekend, and I just need to remember that Ryan is an actor.

But he's a good one. Because I almost believe him when he tells me we have a chance together.

If you're looking for a snort-laugh-inspiring romcom with lovesick housechickens, video game-playing grannies, and hot swoony heroes, you're in luck! Grab the first book in this series today! (All books are full-length standalones with happily ever afters and no cliffhangers!)
