A beautiful sight greeted my eyes over the same old fence I'd been watching for the past eight years, the barest sliver of waxing moon, shining bright in the dusk sky; peaceful yet also exhilarating, knowing this was the end, as well as the beginning.

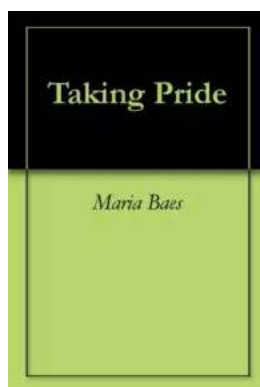

I was finally moving out of my rental, into the house I'd bought post divorce.

Bright sliver of moon

In the night-blue blushing sky

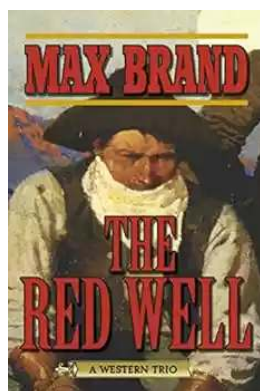

A new beginning

Like the Death in a Tarot deck illustrates, endings and beginnings are tightly entwined, and with each beginning comes the grief of an ending too. Through her introspective poetry, Dawn D. McKenzie takes us on a journey of life, with its simple joys and hardships, love and grief, endings and beginnings.
